

Estrangement

Full-time students 2018/19

What is family estrangement?

Family estrangement generally means physical and emotional distancing between family members. Estrangement occurs when no emotional support or parental guidance is provided and the relationship breaks down. You may no longer have a relationship with your parents, have very limited communication with your family occasionally or have no communication at all. This is known as family estrangement.

Some parts of Student Finance England funding (SFE) i.e. part of the Maintenance Loan, are income assessed based your parent's income if you are under the age of 25. This means that you are considered a dependent student and you must provide evidence of your parent's income. However, if you are estranged from your parents, there is an exception to this rule and your Student Finance can be assessed against your own income as an independent student, which normally means that you would get the maximum amount of maintenance loan.

How can estrangement happen?

Estrangement can take many forms and be for many different reasons; often resulting in the relationship being irreconcilable where the parent and child stop communication. Estrangement might be from just one member of the family, but can often mean estrangement from the entire family, or even the entire community. This can cause a number of very difficult feelings, which may feel difficult to manage and effect your well-being.

How can I apply to be assessed as an independent student due to estrangement?

If you are claiming independent status on the basis of estrangement, SFE consider you as being estranged if you can demonstrate that you are 'irreconcilably estranged' from your parents on or before the 1st day of the academic year for which you are applying for funding.

And/or you have had no contact with your parents for a period of one year on or before the 1st day of the academic year for which you are applying for student funding you can demonstrate in another way that you are irreconcilably estranged from your parents. This means that for the short to medium term you don't see that you will be able to resume your relationship with your parents. It's more about the likelihood of the situation being irreconcilable than the actual period of estrangement.

However, if you become estranged during an academic year it is still possible for SFE to accept you have become estranged. Contact Student Advice to discuss your circumstances if this happens.

Please bear in mind that if you normally live with one parent only and you become estranged from that parent, SFE will expect you to also have no contact with your other parent in order to be assessed as an independent student and they will require evidence of this.

What evidence should I give to SFE?

SFE will require confirmation of the estrangement from a professional person outside your family who knows about your circumstances, for example a Teacher or Social Worker, Doctor, Counsellor, Housing Support Worker, Police or Student Welfare/Adviser at College/School. Student Finance England need to build a picture of your family estrangement.

However, often students who are estranged from their parents have not had any contact with a professional person in relation to the estrangement, so it can be very difficult to get such a letter. You can also submit alternative documents such as a Court Order, forced marriage or FGM order.

Students sometimes ask someone who knows their situation and is not a member of the family to provide a letter although this is often less effective than the supporting letter from a professional person.

The supporting document should be on headed paper, if possible and the person must normally have historic knowledge of your situation as well as being able to verify that you have not had any contact with your parents for a substantial period, or they should be able to confirm details of any recent estrangement. You should not be expected to provide any statement that would compromise your personal safety or in doing so if it would present significant harm to your emotional wellbeing. Student Finance England assessors will look at cases on an individual basis.

If you have difficulty in providing robust evidence as described above, SFE can contact you directly to discuss and help you to review other possibilities. If you are contacted by SFE, you will be given a named Estrangement Assessor who will be a consistent point of contact. If no or minimal evidence of estrangement can be sourced, a telephone review will be arranged at a convenient time to enable SFE to make their assessment.

What information should I include in my personal letter to SFE?

You will need to write a letter to SFE, explaining your estrangement. This does not mean that you are saying you will never be able to resume your relationship with your parents, it is just saying that you don't currently have contact with them, and don't expect to for the foreseeable future. SFE will not show your letter to your parents.

Your letter should mention the circumstances that led to the estrangement, when this happened, how it happened i.e. did you move out and if so where did you go etc. Mention your situation now (e.g. do you have any contact with your parents at all, if so how often and by what means – phone/email/in person) and why you feel that the situation is now irreconcilable.

If you find this process difficult, a Student Adviser can offer help and guidance with doing this.

Am I required to prove my estrangement every year?

Students who have a telephone review to confirm their estrangement (i.e. who were unable to provide full third party evidence) will be contacted in the following academic year to seek any updated evidence. If this is the case and you are unable to provide further evidence of estrangement in the subsequent academic year of your course, you will be contacted again to confirm your circumstances through another telephone review.

Other students who can provide evidence, will be asked to complete a Declaration of Estrangement form each academic year and have this signed by a professional who can confirm continued estrangement.

SFE Confirmation Letter of Estrangement

You can also request a letter confirming that you have been assessed as independent on the grounds of being estranged by ringing SFE on 0300 100 607. SFE staff will then refer your query to the Independent team in order to process your letter within a few days. When received, you can use this letter as evidence of estrangement when applying for the university Estranged Students Bursary.

What should I do if my Student Finance application has been refused?

Please contact Student Advice as soon as possible. An Adviser can help you appeal against the decision or request a reassessment. You may be required to submit further, more detailed evidence.
