Module Code: 6ELIT004W

Level 6

Semester 2

Location: Regent

UK Credit Value: 20

Equivalent Credit Value: US Credits 4 /
ECTS credits 10

The module considers the novel in English after 1945 through an investigation of ideas of temporality. Both the legacy of modernism and the events of the Second World War put under strain ideas about the relationship between past, present and future and the module will focus on both the conceptual debates provoked by this through the period and on the effects of these debates on the shape and form of the novel. In exploring these issues, the module will focus on those novels that have most clearly experimented with formal conventions in their responses to them.

This module provides an introduction to Intercultural Communication. It draws on theory from a range of disciplines to help students better understand the complexities of communicating with people from other cultures. Students will be helped, using intercultural theorists, to become more aware of how culture influences them and others, and to reflect on how it affects the ways they communicate and act. It then aims to develop students' ability to cope with these complexities.

Pre-requisite: Arabic, Chinese, French or Spanish. A testing session will be available upon arrival.

Students will be required to attend a testing session upon arrival to confirm eligibility.

This blended module – involving a blend of lectures, workshops and online student-to-student collaboration – introduces professional language transposition skills relevant to the communication of current affairs in an increasingly globalised and digitised world. Students take ownership of their learning, choosing the topics studied and how to manage the synchronous online sessions. The international collaborations develop interpersonal and organisational skills, as well as interlingual, intermodal and intercultural competences. The module prepares students for the year abroad and, for those not going overseas, enables language practice in authentic, professionalised situations.

Complex Narratives: Representation, Meaning and Identity

Module Code: 5LANS006W

Level 5

Semester 2

Location: Regent

UK Credit Value: 20

Equivalent Credit Value: US Credits 4 /
ECTS credits 10

The module examines the relationship between representation and the production of meaning through the analysis of a wide range of contemporary socio-cultural topics, including gender, ethnicity and language, through different media. In this module students are encouraged to challenge and develop an understanding of the critical links between representation, meaning and identity in a global frame. The analysis focuses primarily on the representation of cultural difference and 'othering' in the public space and aims to answer a fundamental question: How can textual and visual media help to develop an understanding of cultural diversity, cultural difference and help advance intercultural awareness? Examples are drawn from a wide array of media and cultural narratives, including: advertising, literature, film and the internet.

Pre-requisite: Arabic, Chinese, French or Spanish. A testing session will be available upon arrival. Students will be required to attend a testing session upon arrival to confirm eligibility.

This module is designed for final-year students of Modern Languages and Cultures. The students will be exposed to a variety of literary texts with a political content that addresses the dynamics of relationship between the self and the other. This relationship is multifaceted and complex, particularly in the context of colonial and post-colonial societies. To this end, drawing on important texts and events, the course examines imperialist narratives and their consequences for the contemporary world.

Gender Matters: Femininities, Masculinities and Trans-Cultural Practice

Module Code: 6LANS004W

Level 6

Semester 2

Location: Regent

UK Credit Value: 20

Equivalent Credit Value: US Credits 4 /
ECTS credits 10

Across the globe, gender is a key principle of cultural practice and social organisation, defining boundaries of inclusion and exclusion in domestic and public life. Gender is fundamental to ideas about order and stability, power and morality. Yet the kinds of behaviour and beliefs associated with ideas about femininity and masculinity shift across time and place, mediated by historical and discursive formations of colonialism, modernity, post-colonialism and globalism, and by transcultural flows of information and image across national and regional boundaries. This module examines shifting cultural constructions of gender through analysis of narrative, film and ethnographic evidence, referring to China and East Asia, Europe and Latin America.

This module introduces students to the contested idea and practice of democracy. At the end of the twentieth century, it appeared that democracy was well on the way to achieving universal consent; but recently we have witnessed significant challenges to this trend across the globe. This module investigates the nature of these very different challenges to democracy, whether the rise of anti-politics in advanced industrial nations or the failures of the Arab Spring to replace autocratic with democratic regimes.

Global Governance and the State

Module Code: 4PIRS004W

Level 4

Semester 2

Location: Regent

UK Credit Value: 20

Equivalent Credit Value: US Credits 4 /
ECTS credits 10

The notion of global governance has evolved over time as the role of the state as a sovereign actor has been challenged by global and regional integration, the growing influence of non-state actors (such as IFIs, MNCs and NGOs), as well as growing national fragmentation. Global governance implies a need to govern, make decisions and act collectively given the rise in global challenges, such as war, injustice, poverty, development, crime, terrorism, and environmental degradation. As such, the module highlights the important political economy element of global governance and further explores the challenges of, and opportunities for a more inclusive and effective global governance system. The study of global governance is highly relevant to all as 'citizens of the world'.

The Politics of Killing

Module Code: 5PIRS003W

Location: Regent

Level 5

UK Credit Value: 20

Semester 2

Equivalent Credit Value: US Credits 4 /
ECTS credits 10

Under what circumstances is killing lawful and permissible? This module considers the politics of killing and the response of the Westphalian state system to 'life and death' matters within diverse political settings. The module examines how killing has been an important part of state-making practices and the ways in which territorial conceptions of sovereignty have established war-making as an integral part of the modernising narrative of nations and nationalism. The module will explore the ethics of killing at a national and international level, analysing the moral case and reality of Just and Un-Just Wars, as well as focusing on the individual act of killing (and dying) for the state in war. Changing forms of killing during war from genocide, terrorism and drone strikes will be conceptualized. The social conditions that enable war and state killing will also be explored – militarization in popular culture and society will be discussed, along with the possibilities, prospects and history of contesting war and state killing. The course will focus on multiple national contexts in contemporary and historical terms.

The module introduces the study of concepts and practices of global security. The module encourages students to think beyond the traditional divide between international and domestic politics by considering global security as it plays out along a continuum of global and local spaces. Far from being exclusive to sovereign states, security concerns and aspirations have become global just as the practices of humanitarian intervention they inspire. At the same time, today more than ever, these are sustained by local practices and reflected in the very fabric of our everyday experience. The module will thus look at contemporary security at the level of the international, the global and the local.

This module focuses on the thinking, concepts and methodologies that influence development practice in the 21st century, and particularly following the global financial crisis in 2008. In doing so, students examine the ideologies and global institutions that shape political economies in the global south and elsewhere, including the politics of growth and aid. We analyse the ways in which countries and regions are incorporated into the world economy, how this has affected their economies, politics and society, and how they respond to these influences. We will assess past and current prospects of industrialisation, manufacturing and agriculture, with a particular focus on political ecology and the politics of food, labour and natural resources.

This module examines how the internet and other digital technologies are changing the way that democratic politics are conducted in Britain and other countries in the modern world. For most of the 20th century, the political debate between rival parties and ideologies was primarily conducted through the news output of the centralised and top-down mass media produced by commercial and public service corporations for a homogenised and undifferentiated audience. Now that digital media technologies have become an essential tool of everyday life, people are able not only to access a much wider diversity of political opinions, but also to share their ideas directly with one another. This democratisation of the media has almost inevitably changed the ways that today's politics are conducted. This module will examine the dynamics and consequences of this revolution.

NGOs or Non Governmental Organisations have emerged as important global political actors since the global expansion of neoliberal policy changes from the 1980s. As franchises to state welfare functions, as humanitarian actors and as champions of global policy initiatives like climate change and refugee crisis the role, function, responsibilities and agency of NGOs has widened and deepened. Furthermore, for many young millennials NGOs are a viable career opportunity to make a difference! The purpose of this module is three-fold. To develop the knowledge and critical skills to understand NGOs as political actors which work alongside and in contestation with state, international aid agencies and local communities in a global neoliberal context. To provide students with experiential learning of how NGOs deliver on the sustainable development goals through their community-based projects, funding mechanisms and organisational structure. To advance professional development and employability of students who are interested in pursuing a career in the NGO sector as well as develop important transferable skills sought out by private and public sector organisations.
