

Letter of commitment to the UK Concordat for the Environmental Sustainability of Research and Innovation Practice

I am delighted to confirm that the University of Westminster is a signatory to the UK Concordat for the Environmental Sustainability of Research and Innovation Practice.

The University of Westminster shares the ambition of the UK higher education and research sector to continue delivering excellent, impactful research and innovation in ways that are environmentally responsible and sustainable. This commitment aligns closely with the University's strategic priorities and our longstanding focus on sustainability, social responsibility, and positive global impact.

We recognise and support the objectives set out in the six priority areas of the Concordat:

1. Leadership and system change
2. Sustainable infrastructure
3. Sustainable procurement
4. Emissions from business and academic travel
5. Collaborations and partnerships
6. Environmental impact and reporting data

The University of Westminster understands that achieving a sustainable transition in research and innovation practice will require sustained effort and collaboration across institutions, funders, and policy makers. We are committed to working with partners across the sector to embed environmentally sustainable practices and to contribute positively to collective progress in this area.

Further information on the Concordat is available on the Wellcome Trust website.

Yours sincerely,

Professor Peter Bonfield
Vice-Chancellor
