Admissions requirements

There are standard minimum entry requirements for all undergraduate courses. Students are advised to check the standard requirements for the most up-to-date information. For most courses a decision will be made on the basis of your application form alone. However, for some courses the selection process may include an interview to demonstrate your strengths in addition to any formal entry requirements. More information can be found here: <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/study/undergraduate/how-to-apply>

Recognition of Prior Learning

Applicants with prior certificated or experiential learning at the same level of the qualification for which they wish to apply are advised to visit the following page for further information:

Aims of the programme

The BA International Relations programme empowers students to make sense of the shifting dynamics of global order and world politics. You will explore the distribution of power at the global, regional, and national levels and uncover how our global order is the product of different forces across time, place and space. Through this programme, you will learn to critically engage with the core concepts, policies, and practices that define relations between states and citizens in an era of rapid change.

From the outset, students focus on the changing configurations of power, privilege, and identity in world politics. You will study in depth questions of sovereignty, security and decision-making in a post-colonial world, learning to recognize the different locations of political agency within and across societies, and how these are determined and limited by competing interests and historically inherited structures of power. You will develop critical insight of how key political institutions work and how world events are driven by competing ideas. With a focus on the applied dimensions of international politics, while studying on the course you will see questions of global order, sustainability, climate change, diversity, and security from a fresh perspective.

Our teaching programme is structured to support your transition to higher education. You will develop your academic skills as you apply your knowledge to the challenges of global governance and sustainability and while diving into key concepts, case studies, and questions in Politics, International Relations, and Development Studies. You will be encouraged to reflect on the ways in which your new skills enhance your employability and will be supported to start considering the career paths available to graduates of the course. In your second year, you will deepen and expand your understanding of key approaches to the discipline. You will learn about the global dimensions of international security and engage with questions arising from postcolonial politics and the shift to a multipolar world. You will also be introduced to research methods for academic and professional purposes and will develop your employability profile by undertaking 35 hours of work-based learning.

In the final year you will draw on the knowledge, analytical capacities, and research skills you have developed to pursue a dissertation project on a topic of your choosing. You will study questions of global justice and contested sovereignty, gaining advanced insights into the contemporary security landscape and its impact on democratic accountability and global power.

We aim to create competent and confident graduates with a competitive advantage in today's employment market. In addition to the compulsory element of work-based learning, you will have the opportunity to take a Professional Experience year between your second and final years. Throughout the programme, our focus on skills development accompanies a rigorous academic approach to learning. Personal and professional skills are actively developed through in-class training delivered by the learning and teaching teams, as well as expert guests; a variety of innovative authentic assessments; School events and away-days; and field trips, where possible. Our central London location gives us access to sites of government, specialist resources, museums and places of interest, and we maintain excellent links to employers.

Graduates in International Relations go on to develop careers in various sectors, including: the Civil Service; NGOs; international organisations such as the EU or UN; policy and research; teaching; and journalism.

Our students join us from all over the world to explore future opportunities as well as challenges of global politics. We offer well-established international exchanges, including studying abroad for a semester or a full year.

Employment and further study opportunities

University of Westminster graduates will be able to demonstrate the following five Graduate Attributes:

- Critical and creative thinkers
- Literate and effective communicator
- Entrepreneurial
- Global in outlook and engaged in communities
- Social, ethically and environmentally aware

University of Westminster courses capitalise on the benefits that London as a global city and as a major creative, intellectual and technology hub has to offer for the learning environment and experience of our students.

The BA International Relations programme aims to create graduates who are leaders in professional life, globally engaged and lifelong learners. A focus on careers is built-in to each level of the BA International Relations, including into core modules. You will have the opportunity to further build your professional profile via a range of additional workshops, modules, and our optional Professional Experience year. We have strong ties with international partners and key employers, who provide placement opportunities and contribute to careers events.

Students who take the Professional Experience year will register for the "Politics and International Relations Professional Experience Year" module. Upon successful completion of the module you will be awarded 120 additional credits and qualify for your chosen degree "with Professional Experience". The marks and credits of the year are not exchangeable with Westminster credits and do not count towards the final degree classification.

LEADERS IN PROFESSIONAL LIFE

Graduates from International Relations will acquire knowledge, both as academic researchers and as individuals with an informed and global outlook. This knowledge encompasses a broad and diverse range of scholarly perspectives and actively engages with the contemporary agenda. Graduates leave with a commitment to the continuation of knowledge, appreciating its intrinsic value and as a tool within professional life.

GLOBALLY ENGAGED

Studying in a diverse, creative and challenging environment allows students to leave the University of Westminster with a critical outlook. By working alongside scholars who are leaders in the field of International relations, the inclusive and dynamic research culture encourages a global outlook.

RESOURCEFUL AND ADAPTABLE

Our graduates gain the attributes of ambitious and confident thinking, enabling innovation and achievements. Leadership qualities are evident in the diversity of pathways graduates take. Self-discipline allows graduates to attain professional standing and exercise their initiative. Graduates in International relations are adaptable and are able to respond to the new challenges faced within economic, social and global political life.

International Opportunities

Graduates with international experience are particularly valued by employers. Students on this course have the opportunity to spend one semester abroad in their second year or one year abroad in their third year. You may take a work or volunteering placement, both of which provide valuable opportunities to boost your employability and ground your studies in an experiential setting. You may also undertake a study placement at one of our international university partners (the exact list is subject to change). You can also undertake a combination of both study and work. A one-year period of residence abroad enhances your language skills and contributes experiences and contacts that can be valuable in your career. It also encourages intercultural awareness and capability, qualities of self-reliance and other generic skills which further enable you to become mobile and transnational citizens.

Students choosing to take the Year Abroad will register for the two 'Global Politics Year Abroad' modules, one in Semester 1 and one in Semester 2. Upon successful completion of these modules you will be awarded 120 additional credits and qualify for your chosen degree 'with International Experience'. The marks and credits of the year abroad are not exchangeable with Westminster credits and do not count towards the final degree classification.

What will you be expected to achieve?

Learning outcomes are statements of what successful students have achieved as a result of learning. These are threshold statements of achievement the learning outcomes broadly fall into four categories:

- The overall knowledge and understanding you will gain from your course (KU)
- Graduate attributes are characteristics that you will have developed during the duration of your course (GA)
- Professional and personal practice learning outcomes are specific skills that you will be expected to have gained on successful completion of the course (PPP)
- Key transferable skills that you will be expected to have gained on successful completion of the course. (KTS)
- Cognitive Skills, are learning outcomes that help build a conceptual understanding that is necessary to devise and sustain arguments, and/or to solve problems and comment on research.

Level 4 course learning outcomes: upon completion of Level 4 you will be able to:

- L4.1 An ability to identify the primary characteristics of International Relations as a scholarly discipline, informed by key theories and political concepts, in the context of cognate disciplines. ( KU )
- L4.2 Competence in understanding rival accounts of the international system and the historical dimensions of global order. ( KU )
- L4.3 Sensitivity to the role of political culture and power in shaping our perceptions of political order within International Relations, understood through different regional, theoretical and cultural frameworks. ( KU )

- L4.5 A good understanding of governance practices and the factors influencing the operation of key political institutions and processes. ( KU )
- L4.6 Awareness of the importance of information literacy and library skills for studying and researching at university. ( PPP )
- L4.7 An ability to take responsibility for your studies and professional development, especially as it relates to personal development planning (PDP) within a digitally networked world. ( PPP )
- L4.8 A successful transition to the demands and expectations of university-level study. ( PPP )
- L4.9 The ability to develop and sustain well-justified arguments through a range of media including writing, public speaking, and visual presentations. ( GA KTS )

Level 5 course learning outcomes: upon completion of Level 5 you will be able to:

- L5.1 Detailed understanding of the contemporary agenda of global security and the key issues that have dominated International Relations as a discipline. ( KU )
- L5.2 An awareness of the key traditions in international political theory and an ability to differentiate between specific thinkers and debates within the various traditions of International Relations. ( KU )
- L5.3 Knowledge and understanding of the implications of multipolarity and of different regional dynamics for international relations with a particular focus on the centrality of colonial legacies in shaping the world . ( KU )
- L5.4 An understanding of the varieties of approaches to constructing and interpreting the international system, especially through concepts and theories derived from the social sciences. ( KU )
- L5.5 An awareness of the dynamic nature of international relations, particularly as it relates to questions of violence, gender, race, nation and statehood. ( KU )
- L5.6 An understanding of the role of social science methodologies and skills in the research process, including the ability to use communication and information technology for the retrieval and presentation of information. ( GA )
- L5.7 An ability to locate, organise and successfully complete a form of work-based learning in an appropriate organisational setting. ( GA )
- L5.8 Develop the skills to work collaboratively as well as individually in a learning and research environment. ( GA )

Additional Year course learning outcomes: upon completion of Additional Year you will be able to:

- L5.09 An understanding of the demands and opportunities of working and/or studying in an international context. (

PPP )

- L5.10 The ability to apply theories, concepts and research skills related to the field to the cultural and political context(s) of the society within which the experience takes place. ( KU )
- L5.11 An understanding of the abilities and qualities required for successful performance and teamwork in the workplace. ( PPP )
- L5.12 A critical awareness and evaluation of the career pathways that your degree prepares you for. ( PPP )
- L5.13 The ability to work collaboratively and confidently in a professional context. ( GA KTS )

Level 6 course learning outcomes: upon completion of Level 6 you will be able to:

- L6.1 Understanding of the primary characteristics of sovereignty as a contested practice within International Relations and the ability to link these to the changing frontiers of 'identity' and 'belonging' within global politics. ( KU )
- L6.2 An understanding of the evolving security landscape and its impact on democratic accountability and global power relations. ( KU )
- L6.3 An advanced ability to apply International Relations theory to 'real world' events and to think creatively about the applied dimensions of the discipline. ( KU )
- L6.4 The ability to critically interrogate key concepts in International Relations and identify the contribution of theoretical perspectives for the future challenges of international politics. ( KU )
- L6.5 A command of a substantial body of empirical, theoretical and practical knowledge about international politics and an ability to clearly articulate this knowledge in both written and spoken form. ( KU )
- L6.6 An understanding of the responsibilities of global citizenship, especially as it relates to conceptions of sustainable development, civic responsibility, and global engagement through cross-cultural and cross-national perspectives. ( GA )
- L6.7 An appropriate range of analytical and professionally relevant skills to facilitate access to employment or further study and an awareness of the potential opportunities open to graduates of social science disciplines ( KTS )
- L6.8 An ability to conduct and manage your own political research, whether qualitative or quantitative, informed by appropriate research methodologies and theoretical frameworks. ( KTS )
- L6.9 An ability to reflect on individual performance and respond to constructive criticism, evidenced by engagement with feedback and guidance as part of a resilient learning culture fostered throughout the degree ( PPP )

How will you learn?

Learning methods

The BA International Relations programme is designed to place supported independent learning at the heart of the curriculum. Our learning environment is structured to enable you to address social, political and international issues in a way that is both relevant and creative. Our active learning sessions incorporate the transmission of 'facts' but are as much concerned with learning to critically evaluate political interactions in all their manifestations. We provide a learning environment that encourages you to reflect on key concepts, issues and problems beyond the formal classroom environment. We encourage our students to 'own' the classroom and this is reflected in the fact that we have adopted a model of learning which values student-enquiry as the primary focus on all our modules.

Students taking the BA International Relations programme will be encouraged to take responsibility for their academic and professional choices throughout their studies. Each undergraduate module will offer a different experience of learning, with academic staff designing the teaching activities to suit the particular learning outcomes of each subject rather than following a standardised formula. By the end of your course, you will be equipped to take responsibility for your lifelong learning and future professional development.

Each module on the undergraduate programme has its own characteristic teaching and learning features that are appropriate to the particular subject matter (e.g. small group work, problem-based tutorials, review sessions, workshops, symposia, debates, Q&A sessions, document analysis sessions, structured role-plays). The School of Social Sciences seeks to encourage both staff- and peer-led activities where students learn from one another within a co-operative and intellectually exciting atmosphere. We want our students to take intellectual risks, based on their informed judgments of International Relations and their desire to dissect the underlying principles at work in the broader arena of international politics. Although many of our undergraduate modules include formal lectures (including many from scholars, partners and leaders from outside the University), the emphasis throughout is on learning through interactive group work in seminars, tutorials, workshops and symposiums. Many of our modules are designed to establish authentic learning tasks and we model many of our learning activities on 'real-world' approaches.

Our approach to learning and teaching enables students to develop a series of key transferable skills that will benefit them in their future professional life. Our teaching philosophy is oriented to developing student capacity to work independently as well as in groups, to enable students to make use of a full range of resources and techniques in developing graduate level skills. Students are thus encouraged to evaluate their own development and performance in a supportive and constructive learning environment.

Graduates with international experience are particularly valued by employers. Students on this course have the opportunity to spend one semester abroad in their second year or one year abroad in their third year. You may take a work or volunteering placement, both of which provide valuable opportunities to boost your employability and ground your studies in an experiential setting. You may also undertake a study placement at one of our international university partners (the exact list subject to change). You can also undertake a combination of both study and work. A one-year period of residence abroad enhances your language skills and contributes experiences and contacts that can be valuable in your career. It also encourages intercultural awareness and capability, qualities of self-reliance and other generic skills which further enable you to become mobile and transnational citizens.

Students choosing to take the Year Abroad will register for the two "Global Politics Year Abroad" modules, one in Semester 1 and one in Semester 2. Upon successful completion of these modules you will be awarded 120 additional credits and qualify for your chosen degree "with International Experience". The marks and credits of the year abroad are not exchangeable with Westminster credits and do not count towards the final degree classification.

Teaching methods

A number of innovative and distinct learning environments and experiences are offered to students on the BA International Relations, including:

Lectures: Lectures involve presentations by academic staff, policy-makers and/or external speakers. Many lectures involve an interactive and/or 'blended learning' element and we encourage students to participate fully in lectures, either by responding to questions or posing their own questions.

Seminars: Seminars are informal teaching/discussion sessions in smaller groups and involve greater interaction with the lecturer and with small peer groups.

Tutorials: In a tutorial students meet with their tutor either individually or as a part of a small group. Tutorials provide an opportunity to discuss problems and issues and make informal presentations.

Workshops: Many modules will offer interactive workshops that allow students to explore a topic, theme or subject through their own knowledge and informed analysis of a problem.

Symposiums: Allow students to present an authoritative position in relation to a topic, theme or subject. Students are asked to take an active lead in planning a symposium and key transferable skills are developed (e.g. communication, time management, planning).

Reading groups: Provide students with the opportunity to respond and interact with a set text or reading. These semi-structured discussions are an excellent opportunity for students to evaluate key ideas, texts and concepts.

Role-plays and political simulations: Offer students the opportunity to apply theory to practice. Students are encouraged to explore key ideas, themes, and concepts through games and simulations.

Fieldtrips: Students may undertake fieldwork or visit relevant international organisations or research establishments, where possible, as part of their studies.

International exchanges: Students will be able to take part in international exchanges through our study abroad programme.

Internships and work placements: With an internship or work placement students can gain credit by developing their professional experience.

Assessment methods

The BA International Relations programme offers a variety of assessment methods that aim to develop graduates who are open to critical thinking, effective at communication, independent and reasoned in professional life, and ethical in their global outlook. We foster these attributes via a range of authentic assessments, which model real-world tasks. This strategy is strongly linked to policy tasks, research skills and the development 'job-ready' skills alongside traditional academic ones.

Varying assessment activities can help to motivate students with an increasingly diverse range of experiences, learning styles and competencies. We have adopted a mixture of assessment types in an attempt to reduce over-assessment and ensure that students develop a broader range of skills for professional success than would be transferred by traditional assessment methods alone.

Our external examiners routinely comment on how successful and innovative our portfolio of course assessments are. We have developed our assessment framework to ensure that learning outcomes are 'joined up' to reflect the importance of formative and summative approaches. Our assessment strategy aims at consolidating breadth in knowledge and depth of analytical understanding, as students progress through levels 4-6 of the programme.

As a result of our focus on authentic assessment and on tasks which encourages reflection on students' learning process, the course is well placed to respond to the challenges and opportunities posed by Artificial Intelligence, and especially Large Language Models (LLMs). Many of our assessments replicate the challenges of practical engagement and teamwork in the workplace, or else focus on the processes of research and analysis in ways which centre students' own reflections, experiences, and critical engagement with data and sources.

Our students would typically be exposed to the following forms of assessment:

- Policy Reports
- Individual and Group Presentations
- Recorded podcasts
- Project Work
- Critical Reflections
- Journals and logbooks
- Dissertations
- Book and article reviews
- Posters
- Campaign proposals
- Learning Portfolios
- Essays

We have made a conscious effort to standardise assessment within the programme and benchmarked our assessment strategy. As a result of this, each 20-credit module will contain similar assessment expectations and students are informed of the typical time and effort expectations for completing coursework.

Course Structure

This section shows the core and option modules available as part of the course and their credit value. Full-time Undergraduate students study 120 credits per year. Course structures can be subject to change each academic year following feedback from a variety of sources.

Modules are described as:

- Core modules are compulsory and must be undertaken by all students on the course.
- Option modules give you a choice of modules and are normally related to your subject area.
- Electives: are modules from across the either the whole University or your College. Such modules allow you to broaden your academic experience. For example, where electives are indicated, you may choose to commence the study of a foreign language alongside your course modules (and take this through to the final year), thereby adding further value to your degree.
- Additional information may also be included above each level, for example, where you must choose one of two specific modules.

Course management

Course Leader: Responsible for day to day running and overall management of the course and development of the curriculum;

Senior Tutor: Coordinates personalised support and provides additional academic support and referrals to other support services in the University (including the Counselling and Mental Health Service)

Head of School: Holds overall responsibility for all courses run by the School of Social Sciences

Academic regulations

The current Handbook of Academic Regulations is available at westminster.ac.uk/academic-regulations.

Course specific regulations apply to some courses.

Academic Support

Upon arrival, an induction programme will introduce you to the staff responsible for the course, the campus on which you will be studying, the Library and IT facilities and additional support available. You will be provided with a Course Handbook, which provides detailed information about the course. Each course has a course leader or equivalent. All students enrolled on a full-time course and part-time students registered for more than 60 credits a year have a personal tutor, who provides advice and guidance on academic matters. The University utilises a Virtual Learning Environment called Blackboard, where students access their course materials and can communicate and collaborate with staff and other students. Further information on Blackboard can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/current-students/studies/your-student-journey/when-you-arrive/blackboard>

The Academic Learning Development Centre supports students in developing the skills required for higher education. In addition to online resources in Blackboard, students can also attend Study Skills workshops and schedule one-to-one appointments. Further information on the Academic Learning Development Centre can be found at westminster.ac.uk/academic-learning-development.

Learning support includes our libraries, each of which holds a collection of resources related to the subjects taught at that site. Students can search the entire library collection online through the Library Search service to find and reserve printed books, and access electronic resources (databases, e-journals, e-books). Students can choose to study in the libraries, which have areas for silent and group study, desktop computers, laptops for loan, photocopying and printing services.

Support Services

The University of Westminster's Student and Academic Services department provides a range of advice and guidance. Further information on the advice available to students can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/student-advice>

The University of Westminster Students' Union also provides a range of facilities to support students during their time at the University. Further information on UWSU can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/students-union>

How do we ensure the quality of our courses and continuous improvement?

The course was initially approved by a University Validation Panel. University Panels normally include internal peers from the University, academic(s) from another university, a representative from industry and a Student Advisor.

The course is also monitored annually by the College to ensure it is running effectively and that any issues that might affect the student experience have been appropriately addressed. Staff will consider evidence from various sources, including student surveys, student progression and achievement, and reports from external examiners, to evaluate the effectiveness of the course and make necessary changes.

Periodic reviews are also conducted to ensure that the curriculum remains up-to-date and that the skills acquired on the course continue to be relevant to employers. Representative students meet with a panel to provide feedback on their experiences. Student feedback from previous years is also part of the evidence used to assess the course's performance.

How do we act on student feedback?

Student feedback is important to the University, and student views are taken seriously. Student feedback is collected in various ways.

- Through student engagement activities at the course and module level, students have the opportunity to express their voice in the running of their course. Course representatives are elected to expressly represent the views of their peers. The University and the Students' Union work together to provide a full induction to the role of the course representatives.
- There are also School Representatives appointed jointly by the University and the Students' Union who meet with senior School staff to discuss wider issues affecting student experience across the School. Student representatives are also represented on key College and University committees.;
- All students are invited to complete a questionnaire for each module. The feedback from this will inform the module leader on the effectiveness of the module and highlight areas that could be improved.
- Final-year undergraduate students will be asked to complete the National Student Survey, which helps inform the national university league tables. Postgraduate students will be asked to complete the Postgraduate Taught Survey (PTES).

This programme specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the course and the learning outcomes that a student may reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if they take full advantage of the learning opportunities provided.
