Aims of the programme

Introduction

Westminster Law School is located within the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in Little Titchfield Street, which is in the heart of the West End and Legal London. The LLB is an interesting and stimulating course that will give you a broad grounding in legal knowledge and skills, and prepare you to go onto practice within the legal profession. It will also equip you with the knowledge and transferable skills required for other Law-related roles and a wide variety of other professions.

LLB Course Aims

The LLB is designed to allow you to develop cutting-edge legal knowledge and skills which are relevant to a changing world, and which allow you to find your voice and identity in that world through the law. The course will equip you with the core skills to solve legal problems and to propose new legal solutions to pressing issues. The course provides a framework to all students to understand how law shapes the relationship between people, institutions, states and businesses, as well as a structure which fosters your own skills to find, analyse, interpret and evaluate the law. The LLB allows you to develop your professional skills to enable you to use the law in various practical settings. All students have the opportunity to both work on research projects of importance to them, and study a number of specialist areas of law of their own choosing during each year of their degree.

We aim to teach the law in an interesting and engaging way, so that you can understand it in terms of its effect both on society and individuals. You will learn about how the law has developed, how it affects everyone's daily lives and the operation of Government. You will analyse topical legal issues in the news, both in a domestic and international context, such as climate change, equality, personal identity and global security.

Your studies will enable you to gain a deep theoretical understanding of law and to develop the legal, transferable and social skills required to help you achieve a successful future career. The aim of the School is to foster a stimulating, enjoyable and supportive learning community, in which you can develop and thrive.

We aim to inspire you to be passionate about the law and to achieve your full potential within a diverse, inclusive, supportive and friendly community. The course also provides an opportunity to study a wide range of options covering numerous and diverse areas of law that are closely linked to the wide-ranging research and legal professional expertise of members of Westminster Law School. In addition, the Law School has a number of prestigious international partners, and you will have the opportunity to add an international dimension to your degree by studying part of your course overseas with one of them.

You will also have the opportunity to apply your knowledge and skills in practice, and contribute to our wider communities, by working in our Legal Advice Clinic, where you will have the chance to provide legal advice and help to members of the local community in a number of different areas of law. This will allow you to gain valuable work experience whilst providing an important service.

Equality, Diversity and Inclusion: Key values in your degree

Diversity and inclusion are the fundamental values which inform everything we do at Westminster Law School. We are committed to ensuring that our School is a welcoming community which embraces difference and allows everyone to find their voice within the legal world, bringing diversity and difference to the wider legal community.

Our law degrees are therefore infused with a deep commitment to diversity and inclusion from the outset, and in particular in allowing all our students to express themselves and their values through their study and through legal ideas. Our distinctive curriculum focuses, from the outset, on ways of you finding your own voice and developing your own perspectives through the law. Each year of your degree is crafted to help you develop your legal voice and identity.

Level 4

Our Level 4 core module in your first semester on Legal Systems, Cultures and Ideas introduces you to a legal worldview which embraces difference and the importance of different ideas and traditions within law.

This is followed by the Guided Project module, which allows you to use those skills and concepts to focus on and research an area of law and legal thought which is important to you and express your own perspectives, allowing you to contribute directly to ideas in that area. In this way, we aim to create a community in which all students feel comfortable and confident in expressing their ideas and who they are in the context of legal thought and ideas.

Level 5

The Professional Practice skills module immerses you in the world of professional legal practice, giving all of our students the tools to put their legal ambitions into practice in the real world and solve problems in areas of relevance to you. This allows you to develop your professional legal identity.

This is, in turn, followed by the professional practice project module which allows you to develop your own project or practice in an area of importance to you. This ensures that all of our students are both able to feel at home in the legal professional world, but also reshape or reimagine that world in ways which reflect them.

Level 6

In your final year, all students have the opportunity to select between a professional academic project or a professional practical focus in order to perfect and delve deep into those personalised perspectives. Equally, you will produce an artefact or creative project which reflects your graduate journey through your degree.

At Westminster Law School therefore Diversity and Inclusion do not only mean that we welcome everyone into our community. They also mean that we will develop your own active legal voice and identity. At Westminster, law is a tool to be shaped in the image of every student, and every student should feel confident that their whole self will be reflected in your studies, and, therefore, the law. All modules involve opportunities to express your own critical ideas regarding the law and how to improve it.

Diversity and Inclusion within the law

Equally, diversity and inclusion are important to what we teach and research more broadly. Our degrees have a series of modules focusing on the relationship between law and questions of diversity, equality and inclusion in various ways, and you can choose to study a number of these at each level of your degree.

Many of these modules are unique to Westminster Law School, and reflect our commitment to these themes. By studying some of these modules, focusing on questions as diverse as race, religion and disability, you can develop the tools to interrogate and question the law and your relationship with it, and how we might improve it. These modules culminate in a flagship Level 6 module, 'Equality Law', which transforms these questions into a broader set of legal and ethical knowledge, giving you advanced expertise on questions such as discrimination, harassment and positive action.

We would also encourage all of our students, and colleagues, to help us to understand how we might further question our own approaches and embrace new initiatives so that we all continue to learn and to teach each other. This will enable us to continue to achieve our goal to diversify and widen access to the legal profession and legal knowledge, which in turn will improve and enrich the law itself.

Your degree and professional qualification

Your degree has been designed to provide a high-quality legal education which will prepare you for many different careers, both within and outside the legal professions. The course combines the core building blocks of all legal knowledge and skills with various potential areas of focus which allow you to develop your own interests, passions and fields of professional specialisation. While your degree has been designed to keep as many potential pathways open to you as possible, it is also structured in a manner that allows you to progress onto the next stage of professional qualification within various legal professions. You can find more detail as to how your degree can be shaped or used to prepare you for various different professional pathway in the section on accreditation, and further details about broader employability skills are found in the section on employability.

Employment and further study opportunities

University of Westminster graduates will be able to demonstrate the following five Graduate Attributes:

- Critical and creative thinkers
- Literate and effective communicator

- Entrepreneurial
- Global in outlook and engaged in communities
- Social, ethically and environmentally aware

University of Westminster courses capitalise on the benefits that London as a global city and as a major creative, intellectual and technology hub has to offer for the learning environment and experience of our students.

Contemporary organisations need graduates with a good degree and relevant skills. The University of Westminster is committed to developing employable graduates by ensuring that:

- Career development skills are embedded in all courses;
- Opportunities for part-time work, placements and work-related learning activities are promoted to you;
- Staff continue to widen and strengthen the University's links with employers in all sectors, involving them in curriculum design and encouraging their participation in other aspects of the University's career education and guidance provision;

A Law degree is widely viewed as a valuable asset by a large group of employers across a broad range of sectors, both legal and non-legal. This course will prepare you for a variety of legal careers including practice as a barrister, solicitor, legal clerk, paralegal or legal executive. Our graduates also pursue careers in business, accountancy, the Civil Service, education and local government, amongst many others.

The LLB at Westminster develops graduate attributes in a cohesive and coordinated way. Throughout your degree you are expected to reflect on the graduate attributes you have acquired and identify areas for further development. Opportunities will be provided by the Law School to encourage this development, through the Law School's links with employers, alumni in various professions, the wider research community and opportunities for international engagement (for example with international organisations in London or travel abroad).

The Law School is committed to ensuring that work-based learning is integrated into the LLB curriculum, providing a range of opportunities for the development of your professional skills and the improvement of your graduate outcomes. You are able to complete and obtain recognition in the degree for participation in University-wide schemes such as the Westminster Employability Award, the University's Mentoring Scheme, Westminster Enterprise Journey, Westminster Business Consultants and Westminster Working Cultures. You can also participate in online work-based learning programmes provided by University partners such as Forage and Bright Network. You can be employed by the University via its Talent Bank, and be recognised for your role as a student ambassador or representative, working in partnership with Westminster Law School and the wider University. You also benefit from the services of the Careers and Employability Service and College Placements Team, who both assist you in finding placements and promote industry events through the University's Engage platform.

You can also be recognised for your service to the Westminster Legal Advice Clinic, which provides free legal advice to the community, and has been recognised nationally for its innovative Windrush Justice Clinic. You will improve your legal skills under the supervision of members of Westminster Law School and volunteer qualified practitioners, enabling you to grow confidence as a future lawyer and develop your employer network. Participation in the Clinic will also enhance your understanding of legal skills when completing your core professional skills modules throughout the degree.

To ensure that you can benefit from these opportunities, staff continue to widen and strengthen the University's links with employers in all sectors, encouraging their participation in other aspects of the University's career education and guidance provision. The School has regular events with alumni, for example, panel discussions with alumni in the judicial profession and Law employability events. There are also online and on-site fairs for you to attend at the University, such as the Inclusive Futures and Volunteering Fairs.

The employment rate of law graduates from the University of Westminster has consistently been high and Law has frequently had one of the highest employment rates in the University. Some students who progress to further study enrol on an LPC, SQE or a Bar Training Course whilst others proceed to postgraduate academic study for example an MA, LLM, MSc and increasingly at postgraduate research such as at M.Phil or PhD level. The school has numerous distinguished alumni within both branches of the legal profession and the judiciary.

We are proud of our diverse School and are committed to helping every single member of our community to achieve their ambitions and potential. Westminster Law School is ranked top of all UK Law Schools for social mobility, as we are more successful than any other Law School at getting a higher number of students from lower-income backgrounds to high-level employment.

Further Study Opportunities

You will also have an opportunity to undertake a semester abroad during your second year of study or short-term periods of study abroad to attend summer schools, volunteer, take up placements, or participate in field trips organised by students, Law School staff or the University.

The Year Abroad and the LLB (Hons) with International Experience

Globalisation and the internationalisation of law at different levels mean that graduates with international experiences and an understanding of law beyond its national boundaries are particularly valued by employers. You can spend an additional year of study abroad in one of our partner institutions around the world after your second year and return to Westminster for your fourth year. You can see a current list of our partners at:

<https://www.westminster.ac.uk/about-us/our-university/global-westminster/global-partner-network> These arrangements are subject to change.

During the year abroad, you will enrol both at the partner institution and at Westminster. At Westminster, you will register for the two Law Study Abroad modules, one in Semester 1 and one in Semester 2, and, upon successful completion of these modules, you will be awarded 120 additional credits and qualify for the LLB (Hons) with International Experience. At the host institution, you can study in English or in the language of the host institution if you have the relevant linguistic competence.

The marks and credits of the year abroad are not exchangeable with Westminster credits and do not count towards the final degree classification.

What will you be expected to achieve?

Learning outcomes are statements of what successful students have achieved as a result of learning. These are threshold statements of achievement the learning outcomes broadly fall into four categories:

- CLO6.6 Critically and creatively reflect on your learning and personal development throughout your studies. (GA PPP CS)

How will you learn?

Learning methods

The LLB programme is made up of a compulsory 40 credit core (Level 6) and nine further 20 credits core modules. You will also take seven 20 credit modules from a wide variety of areas and specialisms. The four-year LLB with International Experience contains a further two 60 credit core modules.

The core modules address the key skills and knowledge which all lawyers need to understand and succeed in the modern world. These are made up of the so-called foundations of legal knowledge, the core building blocks of all law, as well as the fundamental academic and professional skills which allow you to find, use, explain and evaluate the law. The core is therefore made up of a number of ways of learning. A number of core modules introduce you to key legal areas and concepts, while other modules at each level allow you to develop and demonstrate core professional skills in an immersive way in areas which are of interest and importance to you.

Legal and academic skills are embedded in the teaching of all core modules and elements of employability and professional development are also built in. Outside of the core, students have the ability to shape their degree around the study of areas which are of importance to them, and a number of informal 'pathways' are open to students among a large number of specialist options. In addition, academic staff offer activities that provide an important contribution to academic, employability and personal development.

As students, you will develop a breadth and depth of legal understanding and skills competence, as well as confidence in your abilities. We promote reflection on performance and development in particular and provide specific assistance with this in all the core modules, especially at level 4. You will be allocated a Personal Academic Tutor, who will advise you and assist you at the beginning of your studies and will then continue to provide you with academic guidance throughout your study on the degree.

Although the LLB programme addresses similar skills in some modules, their substantive content addresses different areas of law. The programme has been clearly designed to ensure that modules at similar levels dovetail with respect to skills, development and modes of assessment. Each module will consider the substantive law, legal context, important theoretical perspectives and ethical issues relevant to that area. The core subjects delivered at level 4 and 5 are often seen as distinct areas of study. The LLB at Westminster however delivers these modules in a coherent way at each level and cross-references the skills acquired in one subject to the learning in another, providing you with an understanding of how the law fits together as a whole

The teaching team will provide a framework for understanding knowledge whilst requiring you to develop your skills of research, critical evaluation and analysis. You will be expected to find, analyse, interpret and apply law. Understanding and using the law is far more than merely 'learning law'.

Programme Planning

You will do one option at level 4, two options at level 5 and four options at level 6. You can generally choose any combination of modules, allowing you to build a curriculum which suits your interests and ambitions. However, you may wish to choose a number of options from within a broader theme across the degree, allowing you to construct a specialist 'stream'. You are encouraged to discuss your choices with your Personal Academic Tutor.

The informal 'streams' are based on Westminster Law School's areas of specialisation in terms of teaching and research. You are encouraged to follow subjects that interest you rather than subjects you think you 'should do' or which you think might be expected of you. In our experience students perform much better in those subjects that they want to explore and engage with. Some examples of informal 'streams' are as follows. Please note that optional modules are always subject to subject to staff availability and student demand.

1. Commercial Law: There is a range of options that have as their focus commercial activities and the regulation, whether by law or otherwise, of those activities. Problems in the banking sector have highlighted the importance of domestic and international regulation. Issues around taxation and revenue policies have arisen as disclosures have emerged about some large companies setting up their financial affairs to pay little tax. It is important for law students in this area to understand the organisation, liability and responsibility of corporate entities as well as the more specialised concept of Competition Law. A core module at level 5 signposts the significance of this area, which is then further explored in highly focussed in-depth modules at Level 6.
2. Criminal Law and Justice: Exploring the criminal justice system and criminal law offers you the chance to understand not just what the Criminal Law is but how it is applied and whether it works. The criminal justice system encompasses a wide range of organisations, from the police through the court system to prison and beyond. Increasingly there are private companies involved with law enforcement, imprisonment and rehabilitation. All of you will study Criminal Law at level 4 but there are specialist option modules at every level of the course.
3. Entertainment Law: The school has a long and distinguished history of expertise in this area and offers an LLM in Entertainment Law. There is a strong group of researchers and an active Research Centre. London is one of the world centres of the entertainment industry and law plays an important role in both the internal relationships (for example contracts between record companies and bands) and the external relationships (for example music downloading) in the entertainment industry. Contract Law and Intellectual Property Law are fundamental aspects but there are other niche areas at every level of the course such as Law and Sport in contemporary society, Media Law and Social Media Law.
4. Human Rights: Human Rights Law is both a domestic and international legal area. It involves international obligations and treaties but crucially the application of these at a domestic level. Human Rights ideas have become an increasingly important part of many parts of national law. The School offers a number of specialised Human Rights modules at both undergraduate and postgraduate level reflecting a wide range of staff expertise. You will encounter the application of human rights in core subjects, but specific detailed modules are available across the course.
5. Law and Theory: Even though law, as a subject area, has a vocational and practical dimension it is still important to understand why law is what it is and whether or not it works and if so why? Ideas about law can be studied in isolation or related to specific areas of law. You will experience some aspects of legal theory within the core subjects but those of you who wish to gain a deeper understanding of the meaning of law will enjoy the different theory modules we offer.
6. Law and Practice: The School offers a range of legal professional courses and has a well-established Legal Advice Clinic. A number of staff are qualified solicitors, barristers or hold judicial posts. There will be an emphasis on vocational and experiential learning throughout the course. You will take the core Immersive Professional Skills and Practice module in your second year and can choose the Professional Legal Practice module in your final year. In addition, there are a range of legal professional options including Introduction to Legal Practice and Mooting in your first year. There are also the Clinical Legal Practice: Interviewing and Advising and Clinical Legal Practice: Case Management and Progression option modules in the third year which will allow you to apply your knowledge and skills to real life situations working in the Legal Advice Clinic. You will receive training and the opportunity to work with real clients and become involved in real cases under the supervision of experienced professionals. You may wish to combine some of these modules with the study of specialist areas of law which are the focus of legal practice.

Teaching methods

The LLB course has a strong focus on student led immersive activities, working towards solving problems for people and in society more generally. You will be developing your own ideas, in the seminars, whilst engaging in the use of theory and practical skills.

You will experience a range of different teaching methods including interactive lectures, seminars, tutorials and one-to-one sessions. These will enable you to engage in discussion and presentations with your fellow students, tutors and benefit from wider external expertise from guest speakers.

As you progress through your degree, you will be exposed to different types of learning and teaching at different levels of the degree. For example, in your first year, you will attend interactive lectures and seminars where you are introduced to the skills of sourcing, mapping and using research, as well as more practical application skills, relating law to problem scenarios. You will be supervised through a project where you will develop communication and presentation skills, as you learn to take more control of your own learning.

Second year study builds on the first-year skills, introducing more specific career development and a wider understanding of the profession. You will undertake Work Based Learning and improve your employability by completing the Westminster Employability Award as part of the core, immersive professional skills and practice modules.

As you progress further through the degree, you will be increasingly expected to act as an independent learner, that is someone who is able to identify your own points of strength and weakness and take the appropriate action to improve your performance. Staff are there to provide support and help at every step along the way whether in formal classes or as a Personal Academic Tutor.

Level 6 will provide you with the opportunity to choose whether to align your learning thematically with the Solicitors Qualifying Exam (SQE) in preparation for professional practice, or choose the professional research project pathway as your core, working alongside a researcher, specialist, or research centre in the School.

The Law School supplements your teaching experience by offering you access to a wide range of extracurricular activities, for example seminars, outside speakers, workshops and field trips. Many of these opportunities are not limited to the module in which they are delivered, or even to the level at which they are introduced.

Assessment methods

We are committed to adopting varied, authentic and inclusive means of assessment. Authentic assessment allows you to demonstrate the same competencies, or combinations of knowledge, skills, and attitudes, that you will need to apply in your future professional life, and will help you solving complex problems during your study, as well as prepare you for future employment in various professional contexts. Examples you will come across on the degree include case studies, blogs or journals, presentations, online portfolios, policy papers, projects and client advice.

All modules will provide the opportunity for formative assessments and the provision of detailed feedback. You will be able to discuss each piece of work and what is needed to improve your performance with your tutors, as your skills develop.

In your final year you will have the opportunity not only to assess developing skills and competencies in areas of law, but also to reflect, creatively, upon your journey and the attributes you have acquired as a potential graduate, and present these in a final year show. This assessment is one of the very distinctive elements of the Law School experience at Westminster.

The Course Skills Strategy

Highly skilled graduates have flexibility and autonomy and an ability to react to changing circumstances. Being able to quickly differentiate the reliability and authenticity of sources of information, map this information coherently, and use it to develop ideas and arguments is essential in the contemporary world, and so is the beginning of the skills journey you will embark on on the LLB.

The LLB will progressively develop your legal and non-legal skills to solve problems across the core modules. Whilst all modules will have some essential skills built into their delivery, particular core modules will concentrate on developing you in specific areas. For example you will be developing presentation, research and application skills in your first year, and applying these skills in specific legal contexts. In the second year, these skills become more applied to legal professional ones, to solve people's legal disputes and dilemmas. By the time you reach your final year, however you will be more autonomous in the ways in which you may use these skills, and will have more choice as to how to apply them as your learning becomes more independent in your theoretical and practical problem solving. In your final year you will apply your skills either in the advanced transactional problem-solving context of the profession, by aligning your skills development to that of the SQE, or you will apply them within the context of a legal research project, in both cases replicating the professional context into which you will move on graduation.

Course Structure

This section shows the core and option modules available as part of the course and their credit value. Full-time Undergraduate students study 120 credits per year. Course structures can be subject to change each academic year following feedback from a variety of sources.

Modules are described as:

- Core modules are compulsory and must be undertaken by all students on the course.
- Option modules give you a choice of modules and are normally related to your subject area.
- Electives: are modules from across the either the whole University or your College. Such modules allow you to broaden your academic experience. For example, where electives are indicated, you may choose to commence the study of a foreign language alongside your course modules (and take this through to the final year), thereby adding further value to your degree.
- Additional information may also be included above each level, for example, where you must choose one of two specific modules.

Modules

Level 4

The structure of the degree will provide you with the opportunity to study a broad range of law options. You may also study a language as part of your studies and receive credit for this. The details about the university's Open Language Programme, Polylang are available in the general University information on the intranet. Further information is provided during Arrivals week.

Professional body accreditation or other external references

- SEEC

Whilst undergraduate Law degrees do not have professional accreditation, presented below area a number of different typical scenarios relating to professional pathways which you may wish to follow:

1. "I want to qualify to be a solicitor in England and Wales".

The regulator for the solicitor's profession in England and Wales (the SRA) no longer requires that you follow any particular pathway within your degree. Instead, it requires that graduates sit the so-called Solicitor's Qualifying Exam after completing their studies.

This involves Part 1 (which is focused on legal knowledge) and Part 2 (which examines practical skills). The core modules of your degree are designed to align with the themes contained within Part 1 and the skills which you need to demonstrate in Part 2, giving you a solid grounding in these areas for when you prepare for the exam itself after graduating.

At Level 6, we also offer a 40-credit module which covers in more detail, and in a professional context, some of the specific topics relating to legal practice which are covered in SQE Part 1. You may wish to select this option to give yourself a greater degree of expertise within the relevant areas, which are relevant both for qualification and for future practice. Whether or not you decide to select this module, you will have covered all the broad relevant areas of knowledge contained within the SQE should you wish to prepare for that after you graduate.

Qualifying to be a Solicitor in England and Wales also requires you to undertake two years' worth of so-called Qualifying Work Experience under the supervision of qualified solicitors following your period of study. The professional skills and professional project modules, and the opportunities to work within the Legal Advice Clinic during your degree, are designed to prepare you for that qualifying work experience.

You also have a large number of optional areas of specialist study to choose from during your degree. You may wish to choose a combination of these which reflect some of the areas of law which you would like to work in, as well as others which you have a more general interest in. Many of our optional modules reflect specialist areas of practice within the solicitor's profession.

2. "I want to qualify to be a barrister in England and Wales"

The Bar Standards Board (BSB) sets out certain requirements for the academic stage of qualification to become a barrister. This includes what has traditionally been known as the Qualifying Law Degree.

Your degree has been designed to ensure that all requirements of the Qualifying Law Degree for the purposes of the BSB are included within the core modules of your course. If you successfully pass those core modules and complete your degree in line with the BSB's own requirements, you will be able to progress onto the next stage of qualification to the bar. This consists of a one-year vocational course known as the Bar Training Course. You would then need to complete a one-year pupillage under the tutelage of qualified barristers in a barristers' chambers in order to be fully qualified to practise.

The optional modules throughout your degree cover a wide range of areas of specialist legal knowledge and practice within which barristers work. You may wish to select a number of these according to the areas you are interested in practising in.

3. "I want to become a legal executive"

Chartered Legal Executives are legal professionals who generally work in one specialist field. If you successfully complete your degree, passing all the core modules in line with the regulator's requirements, you are able to take the CILEX Graduate Fast Track Diploma to qualify more quickly to become a Chartered Legal Executive.

Our advanced specialist optional modules and practice-focused modules also allow you to focus on areas of work that you may wish to practice in. In addition, the 40-credit professionally focused module at Level 6 covers in greater detail, and in a professionally immersive manner, various areas of professional practice in which Chartered Legal Executives work.

4. "I want to qualify to practise in another country"

Many jurisdictions recognise Qualifying Law Degrees from England and Wales as partially fulfilling the requirements for qualification in that country. If you pass all core modules and complete your degree you obtain a Qualifying Law Degree. You should check with the relevant local regulator or professional body regarding the credit which you obtain as a result. You should also enquire as to whether there are any additional optional modules which you should take in order to receive greater credit towards qualification in that jurisdiction. Note also that there are a number of optional modules which cover areas of European, international and non-state law and dispute resolution which apply to many other jurisdictions, which you may want to consider selecting.

5. "I am not sure what I want to do after my degree"

Your degree has been deliberately designed to cover the key foundational aspects of relevance to any professional career in law. All professional legal options will remain open to you regardless of what path you choose through your degree.

Your degree has also been designed to incorporate broader critical, practical, communicative, problem-solving and creative skills which are relevant to many non-legal careers. It has been crafted to ensure that there is a focus on economic, social, cultural and political aspects of the areas which you study, as well as the legal ones. A law degree is equally valuable as a stepping stone to non-law careers.

(Please note that professional body and qualification requirements are not set by the University and are subject to change).

Course management

Academic regulations

The current Handbook of Academic Regulations is available at westminster.ac.uk/academic-regulations.

Course specific regulations apply to some courses.

Academic Support

Upon arrival, an induction programme will introduce you to the staff responsible for the course, the campus on which you will be studying, the Library and IT facilities and additional support available. You will be provided with a Course Handbook, which provides detailed information about the course. Each course has a course leader or equivalent. All students enrolled on a full-time course and part-time students registered for more than 60 credits a year have a personal tutor, who provides advice and guidance on academic matters. The University utilises a Virtual Learning Environment called Blackboard, where students access their course materials and can communicate and collaborate with staff and other students. Further information on Blackboard can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/current-students/studies/your-student-journey/when-you-arrive/blackboard>

The Academic Learning Development Centre supports students in developing the skills required for higher education. In addition to online resources in Blackboard, students can also attend Study Skills workshops and schedule one-to-one appointments. Further information on the Academic Learning Development Centre can be found at westminster.ac.uk/academic-learning-development.

Learning support includes our libraries, each of which holds a collection of resources related to the subjects taught at that site. Students can search the entire library collection online through the Library Search service to find and reserve printed books, and access electronic resources (databases, e-journals, e-books). Students can choose to study in the libraries, which have areas for silent and group study, desktop computers, laptops for loan, photocopying and printing services.

Support Services

The University of Westminster's Student and Academic Services department provides a range of advice and guidance. Further information on the advice available to students can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/student-advice>

The University of Westminster Students' Union also provides a range of facilities to support students during their time at the University. Further information on UWSU can be found at <https://www.westminster.ac.uk/students-union>

How do we ensure the quality of our courses and continuous improvement?

The course was initially approved by a University Validation Panel. University Panels normally include internal peers from the University, academic(s) from another university, a representative from industry and a Student Advisor.

The course is also monitored annually by the College to ensure it is running effectively and that any issues that might affect the student experience have been appropriately addressed. Staff will consider evidence from various sources, including student surveys, student progression and achievement, and reports from external examiners, to evaluate the effectiveness of the course and make necessary changes.

Periodic reviews are also conducted to ensure that the curriculum remains up-to-date and that the skills acquired on the course continue to be relevant to employers. Representative students meet with a panel to provide feedback on their experiences. Student feedback from previous years is also part of the evidence used to assess the course's performance.

How do we act on student feedback?

Student feedback is important to the University, and student views are taken seriously. Student feedback is collected in various ways.

- Through student engagement activities at the course and module level, students have the opportunity to express their voice in the running of their course. Course representatives are elected to expressly represent the views of their peers. The University and the Students' Union work together to provide a full induction to the role of the course representatives.
- There are also School Representatives appointed jointly by the University and the Students' Union who meet with senior School staff to discuss wider issues affecting student experience across the School. Student representatives are also represented on key College and University committees.;
- All students are invited to complete a questionnaire for each module. The feedback from this will inform the module leader on the effectiveness of the module and highlight areas that could be improved.
- Final-year undergraduate students will be asked to complete the National Student Survey, which helps inform the national university league tables. Postgraduate students will be asked to complete the Postgraduate Taught Survey (PTES).

This programme specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the course and the learning outcomes that a student may reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if they take full advantage of the learning opportunities provided. This specification is supplemented by the Course Handbook, Module proforma and Module Handbooks provided to students. Copyright in this document belongs to the University of Westminster. Additional Details

Options at Level 6 will be pooled and semesterised in accordance with University timetabling policy. Students must choose a combination of modules which draws equally from each pool, and the same number of options in each semester. Decisions regarding which modules are placed in which pool will be reviewed regularly to ensure that students are able to combine related and complementary modules, and so that popular combinations are possible.
